A Visit To.....The Whittlin' Man

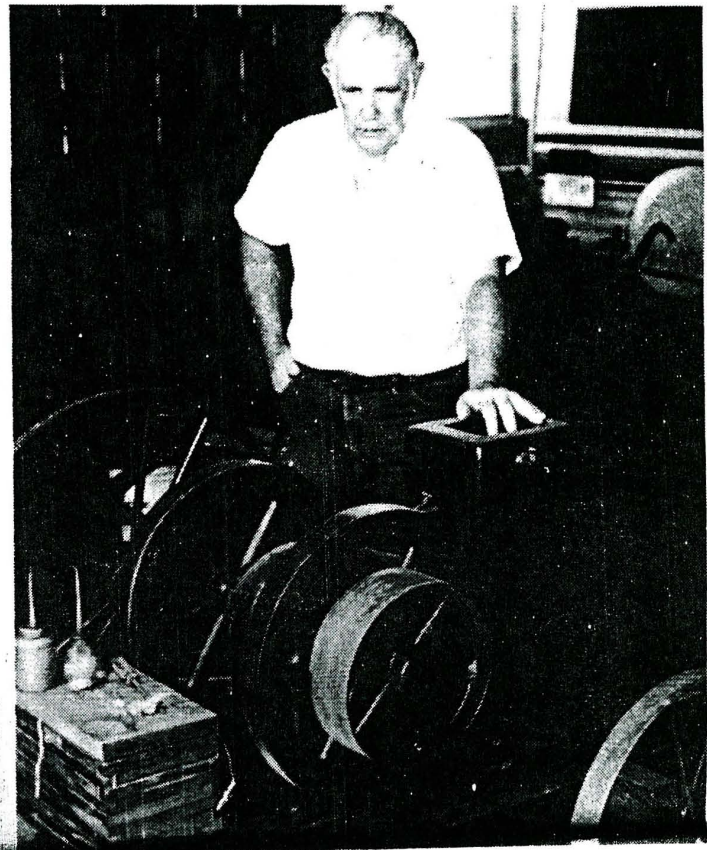

A year ago last May four gentlemen visited Caswell Springs Church and played the dulcimer. Bob Kennedy was there, liked what he saw and heard, and since then has constructed 10 dulcimers and one banjo.

I spent an hour with Bob last Saturday and came away wondering how one man can be so talented and accomplish so much.

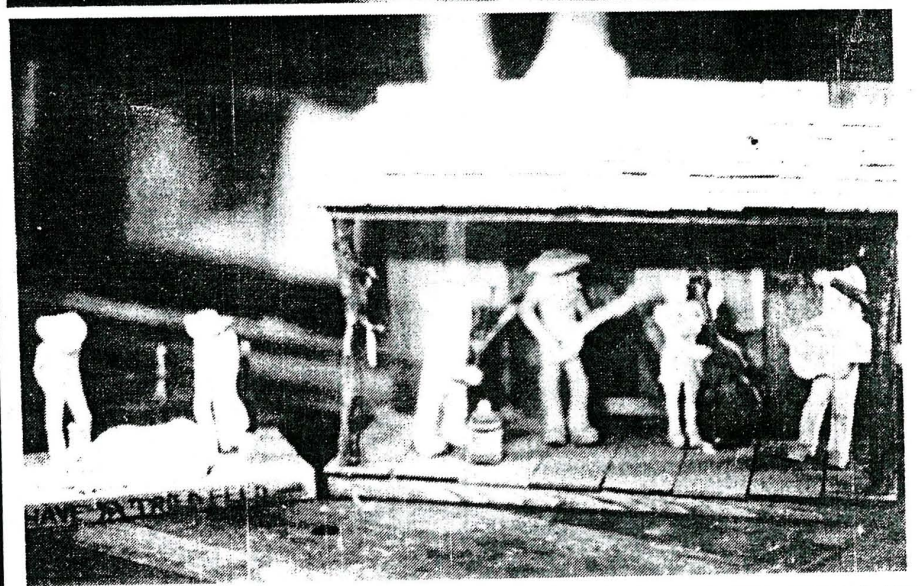

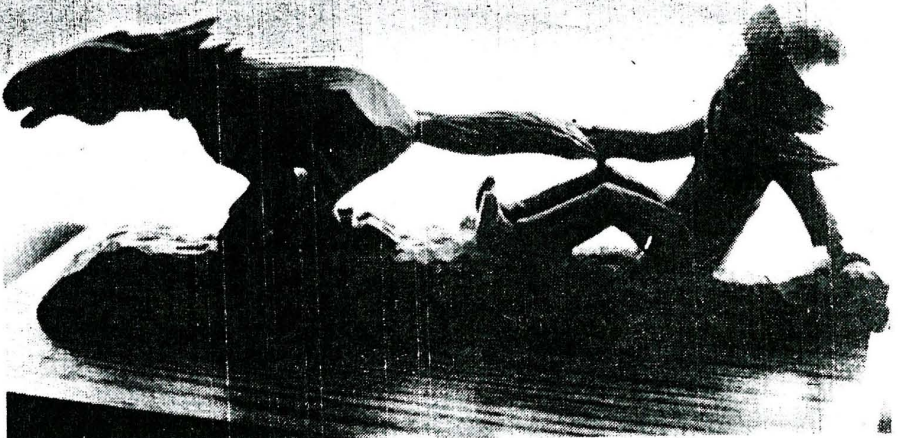

Bob is proficient in wood carving, wagon making, creating objects on his blacksmith forge, making knives, restoring engines made in the early part of the century, making musical instruments, and most everything else! His friends in the 'Bayou Forge Blacksmith Club', of which he is a member, call him their 'Whittlin' Man'. Bob could have survived quite nicely in Shades Cove over a hundred years ago. He likes everything old and enjoys restoring function to items made long ago.

Southern Living magazine once expressed interest in doing an article on Bob and his creations but his work schedule wouldn't allow them to get together.

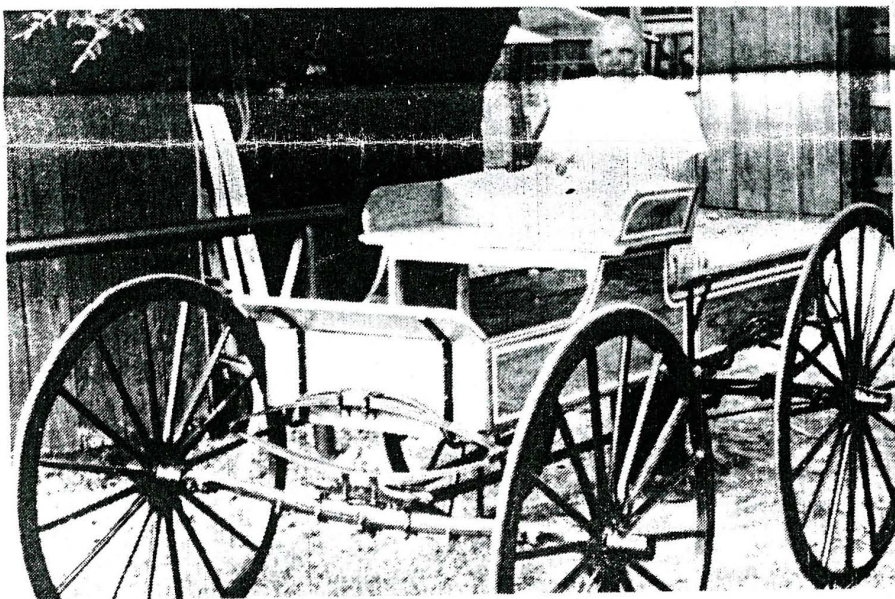

Bob recently retired from the IP mill after forty-two years service. He doesn't seem to be having much trouble finding something to occupy his time.

DEDICATION FEATURES WOOD CARVINGS

Bob Kennedy of the East Central community has been carving figures from wood for years. It's been a hobby. During the dedication week celebration at Pascagoula Public Library Regional Headquarters, Kennedy will make a debut display of his work. East Central librarian Jean Goff is shown admiring the wood statuettes and scenes. Visitors to new library may view the wood carved figures on Thursday (Oct. 16) from 2 to 5 p.m.

With a knife, an anvil and a chisel, Bob can build it

If you can make it with a knife, chisel, chainsaw, lathe and blacksmith's anvil, Bob Kennedy of Three Rivers can build it and probably already has.

A visit to his home at Cumbeest Bluff, where he and his wife, Nell, have lived for 50 years, is like a combined tour of the Smithsonian and a petting zoo. Kennedy, a 70-year-old blacksmith, woodworker, artist, musician, antique collector and builder-extraordinaire, just calls himself "a whittler." Everywhere you turn, there's something Kennedy has created.

"I can't remember when I wasn't building something," said Kennedy, who graduated from Wade High School on a Friday and went to work at International Paper Co. in Moss Point on Monday. "I worked in the power house, generating electricity, for the next 42½ years."

"I don't know anything he can't build," said County Supervisor Manly Barton. "He creates things from scratch, and he's proud of what he does but he won't brag."

He was designing a vase from a maple tree on his new Craftsman's lathe, the newest and biggest Sears sells. His collection of chisels and knives is overwhelming.

In these parts, Kennedy is a horse-and-wagon and oxen-team legend. "I have 11 wagons, two mules and a miniature pony," he said. Kennedy and his son, Darwin, who is carrying on the family tradition, are building a 12th wagon for the collection, which has been used for so many hours of fun riding for youngsters, including his grandchildren.

Kennedy hitched a pair of horses to his covered wagon a few years ago for a two-week wagon train trip from the Coast to Jackson for the Dixie Nationals rodeo event. "I've probably built 16 yokes. It's just something I wanted to do. My grandfather was an ox driver. I didn't log. I just enjoyed working them," said Kennedy. He raised a team of oxen and then sold them "because an ox eats more feed than a team of horses."

"Bob just enjoys his hobbies. He's exceptional and enjoys living," said attorney Sid Cumbest, former schoolmate at Wade.

Kennedy's collections, mostly his own creations, includes tools, bows, arrows, knives, leather goods and especially hammers. "I can't pass up a blacksmith hammer at a flea market," he said. He built his own spinning wheel and stitching horse and has restored countless farm planting and harvesting machines.

The Kennedys enjoy blue grass music festivals, and he enjoys "playing a few tunes."

He has built 11 dulcimers (mountain music instrument with strings) and has another just about finished.

He uses his chainsaw for larger projects like cowboys and horses. "These involve 95 percent chainsaw work and 5 percent chiselling," he explained.

"Bob Kennedy can build anything that he can visualize," said Merchants and Marine Bank President Royce Cumbest. "He is preserving a part of our heritage."

One heritage Kennedy recorded is in a booklet he published named "Livestock Marks of Jackson County." It illustrates the family's earmarkings of cattle that ran loose until the early 1950s. "I wanted to preserve the history of the era," said Kennedy, who enjoys a weekly trip to the stockyards at Lucedale through he doesn't buy or sell much now.

A burly Irishman, Kennedy traces his ancestry back to his great grandfather in the Civil War, and points out that his collection of tools shows patents that also date back to the 1800s.

It might be the 21st century, but a glimpse at his famed Kennedy-built knives or a Kennedy-built muzzle loader will quickly take you back two centuries. And Bobby Darwin Kennedy just keeps whittling, chiseling and blacksmithing creations that most of us only dream about.
